

Mokena Plant of Bowman Co., Closes

Farmers Feed Milk
To Pigs; "Bootleg"
Dairies Raided

The Bowman Dairy Plant at Mokena bottled its last milk Tuesday and Wednesday night the fires were drawn and the plant which has been the main stay of Mokena for the past 18 years is now idle, as a result of the Bowman Company not being able to get enough milk from tested cattle in this section to keep up the supply required for bottling operations.

Most of the men who have been employed at the Mokena plant, have been given jobs in the Bowman Plants in Chicago and go back and forth to their work each day on the Rock Island.

Herman Schweser, manager of the Mokena plant and Harvey Reab are in charge of the local property of the Bowman Company.

Closing of the Dairy Plant hits Mokena hard as not as many farmers will come to town. This affects every business in town and will mean less money spent locally.

Many of the farmers in this section are persistent in their refusal to test and are feeding the milk to pigs while others are selling their cattle and will quit the dairy business for good. In short the dairy business in this section has been nearly ruined and it is probable that the dairy industry will never again be as flourishing as it has been.

Whether enough dairymen will test their cattle so the plant at Mokena can open this summer or next fall, is a question hard to answer.

It is understood that "bootleg" dairies have sprung up in Chicago and many farmers are selling their untested milk to these dairies. Chicago Health Commissioner Bundesen raided one of these "bootleg" dairies Wednesday night and poured out the milk.

Many farmers have been testing in Cook County and cattle losses have been heavy.

The herd of Wm. Keuch of Tinley Park consisting of 219 head, were re-tested last week and every one re-acted, including a tested bull which Mr. Keuch purchased only a month ago.

Mr. Keuch's son Emil, also had 11 head of cattle tested the same time and lost all of them.

Dairymen say, if they were not required to test every 6 months, they would take a chance in buying new herds, but if they do, their herds may react when tested 6 months hence.

Milk from tested cattle that has been brought to the Mokena Bowman plant is now being trucked to Chicago and bottled there.

Hirsch Bros., of Mokena have purchased a herd of full blooded federal tested cattle in Michigan which they expect to arrive soon. They are selling their present herd of federal tested cattle this Saturday at auction.

McCarney Swats
Questionable Places

The "Barney" McCarney, for sheriff rally held at the St. Mary hall at Mokena last Wednesday night was quite well attended. Mr. McCarney gave an interesting talk in which he went on record as opposed to questionable road houses and declared if he is elected sheriff of Will County he will enforce the law to the letter against all such houses of disrepute. He said he had children growing up and that he is anxious to protect other people's children from this deadly menace as he is his own.

Play Coming to

The De Soto Players of Joliet who have been heard and seen in Mokena before, are going to put on a comedy drama at St. Mary's hall, Mokena, Wednesday night April 7th. An excellent program is promised. At the close of the play a free dance will be held, music to be furnished by the De Soto orchestra. Everyone invited.

T. B. Test Raises
Furoe in Cook Co.

(Contributed)

There has been considerable activity recently on the part of the dairy farmers in this vicinity regarding testing of their cattle before the first of April.

They had hoped for and expected that an extension of time would be granted them, in order that they might have this task completed, so that the milk from their dairies would not be barred from the Chicago market, but Dr. Bundesen appears to be standing firm on the ruling that April 1st is the dead line.

Dairymen are being informed by the dealers, that they can not accept any milk from untested herds after that date, therefore they are anxious to get their cattle tested, otherwise the milk will have to be fed to calves or pigs on the farm or else thrown away, being a decided loss for the farmer.

The testing of cattle is progressing quite rapidly and many dairymen are receiving the surprise of a lifetime, when they learn after the reading of the test that every animal in their herd has reacted, and has to be condemned, and in many other instances practically the entire herd, with the exception of 2 or 3 head are condemned.

Martin Smith lost his entire herd, likewise Wm. Keuch and Chas. Mager. Wm. Beagley lost all his milk cows, Elmer Newton who had built up a good herd of pure bred Holsteins lost 24 out of 38 head. Wm. Hewson lost nearly all his cattle. It is estimated that at least 50 per cent of the cattle in this vicinity subjected to the test, have reacted and been condemned.

According to Matt Ludwig, manager of the Newton-Dowd-Quigley Company Milk Plant at Orland, the plant will be cut over 50 per cent the first of April and of course this condition can be applied to a greater or lesser degree all over the entire dairy district supplying Chicago with milk.

Many farmers are wondering what the outcome will be, and many will hesitate about buying more cows to replace those condemned, not knowing what may happen when another test is applied to their herds. Some farmers are of the opinion that the dealers will have to pay more for milk in the near future, others predict that the testing of cattle will have to be discontinued on account of the enormous loss of dairy cattle. Be that as it may, one thing is still evident, and that is, that the farmer is still the "goat" and has to take what is dished out to him, and this will continue until the farmers are properly organized, and will stand by their organization, so that the same can render efficient help in a crisis and at all other times.

The labor organizations of the large cities, are well organized, and are able to secure for members any just demands for a reasonable wage, and it looks as if the farmers will have to organize on the same basis as the labor unions in order to protect their interests.

Dairymen are receiving about 5 cents per quart for milk produced on their farms, this milk is sold by the dealer for 14 cents per quart, practically two-thirds more than the farmer receives for producing it, yet the city dweller thinks that the farmer is the man responsible for the high price.

One thing is certain, and that is, if the conditions on the farm and the outlook for the farmer does not improve, there are going to be more city dwellers and fewer farmers.

Rosenbaum Rally at Frankfort Sat. Eve

A big "Rosenbaum" for sheriff rally is to be held at the Frankfort hall on Saturday night, April 3rd. Entertainment features will also be on the program. Good Speakers will deliver addresses. Everyone invited.

New Lenox is in the midst of a red hot school fight. The village has been growing so rapidly of late that the present school building is taxed beyond capacity and a new school is the need of the hour.

Tinley Park, Matteson, Frankfort and Mokena May Get Gas Mains

The Public Service Company of Northern Illinois is contemplating the extension of their gas mains from Blue Island to Tinley Park, Matteson, Frankfort and Mokena, according to latest reports.

Mayor Max Haass of Frankfort, in an interview said that officials of the Company had taken up the matter with him several weeks ago. Each village board will be asked to give the Public Service Co., franchise rights to lay their mains in the village limits.

The village boards of the towns named will most likely sign up the franchise rights soon. Mayor Haass said he understood the Public Service Co., expect to start work on laying the gas mains this summer.

If these plans carry, the Public Service Company will find itself swamped with orders for gas as nearly every home in this section as well as many farm homes are ready to sign up for gas, which will mean a big boom to this whole section.

Oak Lawn Schools Preparing For
Spring ProgramOAK LAWN STANDARD SCHOOL
Wiley Simmons, Prin.

Our spring entertainment which will be held sometime before the middle of April, will have two distinctive features. "The Enchanted Woods," an operetta, will be presented by the pupils of the lower grades assisted by a few of the higher grade pupils, and "Birds, our Feathered Friends," will be presented by the pupils of the higher grade. Special numbers musical, dramatic, and song-opera band. Do not miss it.

We must not lead these children to believe that graduation is the preparation for a useful life. The diploma only certifies that certain requirements have been met, and is a worthless scrap of paper unless the pupil measures up to the standards set forth in the diploma. A young man may be able to get a position by showing his diploma, but he cannot hold his position by virtue of his diploma. Neither will the mere fact that he has an eighth grade diploma help him to solve his algebra problems.

We must not allow the pupils to "slide" through the grades in order to get out of school or into the high school. It is not only dishonest on the part of the teacher but unjust to the child if the teacher leads him to believe that he deserves a promotion that he does not really deserve. If we deceive them, they may not realize it, today but they most certainly will realize it, in later years after they have grown up. Let's deal with them, to-day, in such a manner that in after years, they will give us full credit for our instructions and guidance which will have led them to honorable lives and positions in the world. If we correct them today, they may resent it, but in later years, they will respect us for it.

Look out for us when the Festival time comes around! It will be held on June 4th.

Our school is progressing nicely and all pupils are anxiously looking forward to the time when they hope to be promoted, while the teachers are earnestly trying to impress upon their minds the importance of earning the promotion before they get it. This is really the most interesting part of our year's work as we come in on the "home run."

We are standing for the very highest type of school work and school play that can be had in a school of our kind, and we extend a cordial invitation to all parents, asking them to visit our school rooms and playgrounds when it is convenient for them to do so. Come and see what your boys and girls are doing in their classes and games.

Our sewing class is doing some splendid work under the direction of Mrs. Simmons, and you will have

Blizzard Ties Up
Country Roads

March lived up to its traditional reputation about "going out like a lion" for it sure roared out this year.

The worst blizzard in many years swept this section Tuesday and Wednesday and the snow fall was exceptionally heavy.

Highways were blocked in every direction and many cars and trucks were stuck in deep drifts. Milk trucks were unable to run Wednesday. One of the big milk trucks got stuck in a big drift on the concrete road south of Tinley Park Wednesday morning.

Wagons and bob sleds were in use Thursday morning and in some instances were overturned in attempting to break thru deep snow banks. Some of the less traveled roads will not be open for another week or more.

While coming along the Lincoln highway in a truck belonging to Emil Borges of Mokena, Karl Kraus got stuck in a deep snow drift a mile east of the road house, Cooper and Hostert of Mokena sent out 3 cars and the wrecker to bring him in. This happened in the late afternoon, late at night they got to the Mokena road leading off the Lincoln way at Cleveland's corner and then got marooned in a big snow bank. After working all night to get the cars out, the men had to give up the job and walk home at 5:30 Thursday morning. Later in the day the cars were shoveled out and brought in.

A number of telephone lines were put out of commission by the storm. On Tuesday night the street lights at Mokena were out and the town was in darkness the rest of the night, but service was again resumed the next night. Suburban trains on the Rock Island were not scheduled to run by the storm.

to make deliveries on all their routes on account of the roads being blocked.

No serious accidents or other mishaps due to the storm were reported.

Our boys are still improving in their manual training skill. The workshop in the basement is one of the most pleasant places in our school. At present the boys are making weather vanes and bird houses, they are especially interested in making houses for the wren, blue bird, and martin.

Our achievement club held its regular monthly meeting on Friday March 26th. The regular business was transacted after which the club conducted a round table discussion of preparations for spring projects. Our club will carry 12 sewing projects, 3 music, 6 Pet stock, 1 poultry and will make 15 gardens. We think this speaks well for our club of 24 members.

Wilbert Harnew and Crystal Kluck, who are president and secretary of our achievement club, attended the Cook County Juvenile Farmers Institute held in the Art Institute on Wednesday March 24. They were accompanied by Mr. Simmons, and brought back an interesting report of the meeting to our club.

NEW LENOX HAS SCHOOL FIGHT

Recently the school board decided to purchase a portable school building to take care of the overflow of pupils. The portable building alone would cost $1800 and to this would have to be added the cost of seats, furnace, erecting work, etc., thus bringing the cost up to $3000 and more. An injunction was promptly taken out by Wm. Drake of New Lenox restraining the school board from buying the portable building.

Four railroads, the Western Union Telegraph, Pole yard, Public Service Co., and Bell Telephone Co., pay the most of the school tax in this township and it is pointed out that New Lenox is entitled to and should have a modern school building, which will not only provide for the needs of the present, but also for the future generations.

A red hot school election which it is said will be the largest school election ever held in New Lenox, will be held April 10. Walter Gougar is a candidate for school director. The term of Peter Sinclair expires.

The Brotherhood members also entertained the lady members and their families to a fine luncheon. A good time was had by all.

Auto Ditched;
Sick Man Dies

Shock combined combined with minor injuries suffered when the automobile in which he was riding along the Lincoln highway overturned in a ditch near the J. C. Brisbane farm east of New Lenox Sunday, resulted in the death on Monday of John Burrow, 40 years old, Tipton, Iowa, a tubercular patient.

Brought to Joliet in the police ambulance, Burrow was given first aid treatment at St. Joseph hospital and then ordered to the Will County Tubercular sanitarium.

Reporting the accident to authorities, Albert Weeks, 25 years old, Muscatine, Iowa, driver and owner of the automobile in which Burrow was a passenger stated he was enroute to Detroit, Michigan his home when the accident occurred.

According to the story told by Weeks he met Burrow in Detroit two weeks ago. Learning that Weeks intended to drive to Iowa, Burrow decided to make the trip, declaring that it would be cheaper than paying railroad fare. Weeks did not know that Burrow was ill.

Mokena to Vote on
New School Ground

The question of a new public school for Mokena has been under discussion for sometime and now the voters of this school district will be given a chance to vote on the new site for the new school at the school election to be held at the Mokena village hall on Saturday, April 10th. The voters will be asked to vote on the proposition whether district No. 159 shall issue bonds for $4500 to pay for the following lots to comprise the new school grounds: Lots 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9 and 10 in Braun's Sub-division of part of blocks 7 and 8 McGovney's 1st addition to Mokena, also block 14 and part of block 15 of Denny's 1st addition to Mokena.

Chapter. III

So the Alaskan and Indian packed up two sleds and started off. At night they stopped rest.

They heard a crash on the ice. The Indian picked up a hatchet. The Alaskan took a rifle. They walked a little way from the sleds. What did they see but a big polar bear!

The Indian was a good shot. He threw the hatchet but missed. The Alaskan aimed and hit the bear behind the ear. But hair and hide were thick. The bear was angry and leaped upon the Indian.

The Alaskan hadn't any shot left, but picked up the hatchet that the Indian dropped and hit the bear on the head. It fell back dead. The Indian was unhurt. They put the bear on the sled. They slept well after the fight. In the morning they saw wolves coming nearer and nearer. The wolves smelt the meat. They hitched up the dogs and started off as fast as they could go. On and on came the snarling, hungry wolves after them.

Every Friday night during Lent the Stations of the Cross have been made followed by a sermon and Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament. The blessing and distributing of palms took place Palm Sunday. A scholastic from St. Ignatius College read the passion according to St. Matthew. Six Acolytes assisted in the sanctuary. The beautiful ceremonies of Holy Week will be held on Maundy Thursday, Good Friday and Holy Saturday. Masses on Easter Sunday will be celebrated at the usual hours of 8:30 and 10.

A QUEER MAID

SYNOPSIS.—Traveling by canoe on the Mississippi, on his way to Biloxi, in the early days of the settlement of Louisiana, William Brampton, English spy, known to Indians and settlers as the "White Indian," sees a Natchez Indian post a declaration of war against the French. For his own purposes, he hastens to Biloxi to carry the news to Bienville, French governor. Brampton meets an old friend, Joe Labrador, Indian half-breed, who warns him Bienville has threatened to hang him as a spy. Brampton refuses to turn back. He falls in with Jules and Basile Mator, on their way to Biloxi to secure wives from a ship, the Maire, bringing women from France. At Biloxi Brampton protects a woman from a sergeant's brutality. She tells him she is Claire Dahlskaar, picked up in a raid in Paris. Evidently well bred and educated, she is a mystery to Brampton. He intervenes to prevent a man, English, known as "Old Six Fingers," following her to New Orleans. A Frenchman, Francois Narbonne, slightly demented by stories he has heard of the riches of the New World, introduces himself. Bienville accuses Brampton of treachery, but the latter escapes a respite from death by revealing the Natchez declaration of war. He is to await the arrival of a former companion, Damoan the Fox, who will exonerate or condemn him. Damoan has documents proving Brampton an English spy. After a struggle Brampton wrests the incriminating papers from Damoan and escapes from Biloxi. He meets the Mators and they go to New Orleans in a sailing packet. At the landing place Brampton again encounters Joe Labrador, whom he sends to bring Claire to him. Brampton questions her closely, but she will tell him little of her history. When they leave in two canoes for the English settlements.

"We now come to the great river, the Mississippi. I am positive the man Damoan and his Indians are coming up the river to look for me. I have paddled hard to make the big river ahead of them. Now I am wondering if it is wise to go ahead of them."

"But how can we flee from them unless we be ahead?" she exclaimed. "If they are ahead and we can follow them I should like it better," I replied.

"Oh, la! La! To think of that!" And for the moment she was entirely new and most tantalizing young woman. She laughed softly and with such zest that I was amazed and thrilled.

"Oh, monsieur! Now I do feel safe when you can plan so shrewdly," she cried. "To be sure! They seek us ahead of them, their eyes are all to the front, and we come softly after them, like a mouse walking after the cat! The big river? Pooh! I will not be afraid of it any more."

"How old are you?" I shot over my shoulder.

"Nineteen. Twenty in December," she promptly replied.

"Have you paused to think what people may say when they are told you traveled with me from the Mississippi to the coast?"

Her grave eyes stared at me in deep perplexity, and I could have kicked myself for putting the question.

"What will they say?" she slowly repeated, with a little frown wrinkling her brows. "Certainly they will say Monsieur Brampton is a most kind and compassionate gentleman to help a poor girl find a place of safety."

I was glad to be out of it thus easily, and to prevent her taking time to analyze the query and arrive at a more world-wise conclusion, I spoke of Six Fingers. Her face reflected terror, and she whispered:

"That man is the devil, or the devil's man! It is because of him that I wear this."

And from her blouse she pulled a small dirk in a sheath and secured by a string around her slim neck.

"He bothered you in New Orleans?" "The French gentleman, the one who gave me your note and who went away before I could thank him, kept very close to the bad one. But I do not think the bad one wished to talk with me in New Orleans. However, he will follow me if he can."

"But what has he to do with you? How long have you known him?"

"Known him, monsieur?" she gasped, eying me in amazement. "One does not know such cattle."

As she finished the scarlet of confusion suffused her face, and she turned her head and said:

"He did not bother me on the ship. But over here, in this country, if a man is strong and has a black heart—" "And has been a pirate," I suggested.

"Yes, yes! He has been a pirate! Terrible stories he told on the voyage over! He has done monstrous things. He is still a pirate in his evil heart!"

This perverted explanation deceived me none; she had not thought of him as a pirate until I gave her the idea. And what righteous indignation when I assumed she had known him in the past! It was all most bewildering. My estimates of her had ranged from a guttersnipe to a fine lady; from a street gamin to a refined and worldly-ignorant child. If appearances and speech went for anything, she possessed the hauteur of the lady and the ignorance of the child. If her conflicting stories of how she came to be on the Maire, her obvious poverty, and her useless hands were to be considered, there could remain only the hateful conclusion that she was a product of the streets, and that life had been horribly unfair to her.

"We land here, mademoiselle," I announced, drawing up to the bank. "The river is just ahead. I must ask you to stay here while I look about a bit."

"Stay here alone?" she exclaimed, glancing about as if expecting to find danger in her innocent surroundings.

"You will be safe. I would not leave you if there was any danger. Here is my pistol. If you feel very much afraid you can fire it."

"It is all so strange, you will have the good heart to excuse, I do not care for the weapon. Go."

This was delivered with the poise and composure of a mature woman. And yet when I reached the bend and stole a backward glance and saw her standing where I had left her, her hands clasped before her, her head bent in mournful attitude, she became a child again. I suddenly was loath to leave her there disconsolate, thinking she might be frightened during my absence.

I pushed forward rapidly, and at last stood on the shore of the Mississippi. I stood for a moment looking across its broad expanse, then I was on my hands and knees among the bushes, watching two pirogues turning the bend below. The one ahead was large and filled with Indians. In the second were three men, two of whom were white men. I hastily retreated a considerable distance.

Secure in my new position, I waited for the pirogues to cross my line of vision; and as I watched I was startled by a light step behind me. Wheeling apprehensively, I was in time to detect a slight motion in the bushes. I crawled toward the bushes to investigate, but before I could reach them Mademoiselle Dahlskaar stepped into view; into view, also of anyone on the river passing the Iberville. I grabbed one of her be-llegged ankles and yanked her to the ground and glared savagely as she would have opened her mouth to scream. Then toward the Mississippi I turned to learn the worst.

The Choctaws were gazing upstream. None was looking in our direction. But in the other canoe one of the white men was touching the Indian on the shoulder. The Indian ceased paddling and stood up and peered under his hand toward our hiding-place. Then he dropped on his knees and resumed paddling. The white man, who had been suspicious, gesticulated with the other white man, who gazed toward our hiding place, then sank back.

His companion, not yet satisfied, stood up and fed his hawklike gaze on the thick growth; hawklike, because he was Damoan the Fox. And he thought he had seen something. His companion wore a blanket over his shoulders and had his hat pulled low, and I could not make out his features. The Fox reluctantly resumed his paddling, but so long as the Iberville was in sight he looked back.

The two pirogues passed from view. I remained motionless for some twenty minutes, waiting to see if they were playing a ruse, and, after making us believe they had gone, would be stealing back to surprise us. At last I was satisfied that Damoan at the most had caught only a suggestion of motion from the corner of his eye. Doubtless he decided it was some animal. I rose and returned to reproach mademoiselle for her indiscretion. What I saw held me tongue-tied. It was an entirely new phase of her. Raged in her eyes like war-beacons. Her breath came fast and furious, and the ivory of her face was stained a vivid scarlet. She was glaring at me like a madwoman, and the small dirk was drawn back for a drive.

"You canaille!" this amazing creature hissed at me, as I stood there with my mouth open, like an expiring fish. "You dare lay a hand on me in anger! Don't lie! I read your eyes. You were angry and you dared lay a hand on me while so base!"

I could only think of a panther's whelp, spitting and clawing. She was such a tiny tornado that I must have smiled a trifle. Certainly there was something in my face that caused her to leap forward. Then I was ashamed of myself, and felt only pity for her. I dropped my arms to my side and awaited her pleasure. She pressed close, her gaze baleful and vengeful, meeting mine squarely. Just as I believed she was going to strike she staggered back with a wild little cry, dropped the weapon and sank on her knees and hid her face in her hands.

It was horribly pathetic; and I wished Joe Labrador, or any other thick-headed voyageur could have been there to give me some of the kicks I felt I deserved.

I scooped her up and stood her on her feet, replaced the dirk in the sheath outside the blouse, and patting her awkwardly on the shoulder said: "There, there, child. I am sorry."

With her hands still pressed to her face she managed to repeat: "You laid a hand on me in anger!"

"I'm sorry," I simply reiterated. "We creatures of the woods lose all sense of fineness. We are crude. My only thought was that the Fox would see you; then we would be hard put to escape him and his Choctaws. I meant well."

She turned and walked back to the pirogue, her braids over her shoulders and hanging down in front like an Indian woman's. In truth, I had been extremely provoked at her blunder; and I feared my grip on her small ankle had been unconsciously severe.

"That Man is the Devil, or the Devil's Man! It is Because of Him I Wear This."

I watched her as she walked away with small head bowed to see if she limped, and I rejoiced when she showed no signs of hurt from her rough tumble. And what a fine-spun, sensitive nature! With perhaps her life in peril she took exception to my mode of preserving it. Autocracy implies superiority.

On what did she base her autocratic resentment of my style of making her duck from view of Damoan the Fox? This little forlorn sparrow from the streets of Paris—it all was completely beyond me. And yet the pain at having caused her grief was none the less poignant. Taking my time I also returned to the pirogue, and seated myself apart from her and lighted my pipe.

"Why do we not proceed?" she asked without looking at me.

"Damoan and his red butchers must be given time to draw ahead," I told her.

"I think, Monsieur Brampton, you had best take me back to the Bayou St. Jean, where I can make my way to la Nouvelle Orleans. If that be too much bother, hollow a log like this and I will make my own way. Or a raft."

I was most careful to maintain my gravity as I listened to her absurd request. I took some time to think it over, apparently. Then I gently replied:

"You are your own mistress. I only wish you to act wisely. If you really desire to go back of course I will take you. Do you care to tell me your reason for returning? Is it because you cannot trust yourself longer to my protection?"

My question worked the last effect I could have desired. It reduced her to humility. Her transition from the tone of the grande dame afore with indignation to that of a girl humbly supplicant made me feel like a zany. She was kneeling before me and stretching up her small hands and, like a penitent child, begging me to overlook her behavior.

"For God's sake, don't!" I cried in English, catching her wrists and pulling her to her feet.

"But—I raised—raised a mortal weapon—against you," she sobbed.

Luckily my impulse to ridicule the tiny dirk was checked in time to permit my expression of gravity to remain.

"It was but your way of showing resentment," I said soothingly. "It was perfectly natural. One does not like to be mauled about unless one knows it's for one's own best good. Now that you know that, it is as if it never happened. You are nervous, Mademoiselle Dahlskaar. You are not yourself. You have suffered much mentally. Let us say no more about it. It is nothing after one has slept and rested. So, shall we fare north again? It is not wise to let our pursuers get too far ahead."

Without a word she entered the pirogue and seated herself on the blankets. I placed my musket in the bow, ready for my hand, and paddled slowly around the last bend, my eyes impatient to search the upper reaches of the river. There was no sign of the two pirogues.

"Monsieur Brampton," she softly said as I drove the pirogue against the bank to allow her to land while I dragged it through the shallows into the great river; "I can go no farther until I know the truth."

Here was an enigma cropping out of this small bundle of puzzles.

"Mademoiselle, I listen," I politely told her.

She stood with one foot on the side of the canoe, waiting for me to speak before she would even step ashore. "I must know I'm forgiven—that your heart holds no resentment against me," she said.

I resisted a temptation to dismiss the matter lightly, as that was sure to embroil us in further misunderstandings. It would have been more simple if she would remain on one plane, that of child, or woman. So I made my men very serious as I stood there holding her hand, and earnestly declared:

"There was never anything to forgive. But if you must have it so, then you are forgiven. I have never held resentment against you and never can. Now do you believe me?"

The sudden radiance of her face astounded me. One would have thought I had granted her some rare boon. She bobbed her head in place of words and sprang ashore. I waded through the shallows, pretending not to observe her fight for self-control, and prolonged the task of dragging the log canoe through the ripples. At last I had the pirogue in deep water, and she, quite composed, took her place and I swung into the river.

There was no sign of Damoan and his companions ahead. As the sun was now close to the western forest crown I began to fear they had gone into camp and that I might be approaching too close. We had been passing through the territory of the Bayogoulas and had not seen an Indian. I suspected that the war threatened by the Natchez had sent the hunters back to their temples to make new medicine to the Opossum, their chief deity, before joining with the Choctaws as allies of the French.

If the Choctaws came into the fight then their hereditary enemies, the fierce Chickasaws, would stand by the English; and Sieur de Bienville would find the fighting not to his liking. I said nothing about Indians to the girl as I made for the high bank; and she, simple one, assumed it was natural for none of the aborigines to frequent the river.

"Why do we go ashore?" she whispered over my shoulder, as if fearing the river would overhear us and betray our presence.

"To camp for the night, mademoiselle. The darkness will rush quickly through this lane in the forest. Here we have high ground and good water."

I got the canoe ashore and helped her out and packed the blankets and musket and smoked beef up the bluff. While she sat under a tall tree, with her braids over her shoulders, I gathered bark and made her a shelter with the opening toward the spot where I would build the fire. I knew of a spring back a bit from the bluff, and from this I procured a gourd of water. Then I gathered dry wood and started a small blaze and instructed her how to feed it so we would have a bed of coals for cooking our supper. Then, taking a hook and line, I informed her she was perfectly safe and that I would soon return from trying for a fish in the river.

I lighted the fire and descended to the river without having spoken a word. For twenty minutes I patiently sought my fish without success. In straightening up I was surprised to behold her slim form on a log behind me.

"You here!" I exclaimed. "But I thought you were to remain and feed the fire?"

"I did not care for the loneliness, monsieur," she calmly informed me. Her disregard of my wishes—in my mind I called it orders—annoyed me. However, I managed to smile and remind her:

"We will have lost much time in making coals for broiling the fish."

Evidently the girl will get the fugitives into trouble, for they are undoubtedly pursued.

Masterpieces Lost to World Through Flames

The world is very much poorer today because so much classical literature of the early centuries has been lost.

Aeschylus is said to have written from 70 to 90 dramas, but only seven, in a complete state, have been handed down to us. Only seven, too, of the 120 tragedies written by Sophocles are known, with, perhaps, 100 fragments of the others. Of the dramatic works of Euripides, which are said to have totaled 92, only 17 tragedies and a play, dealing with satyrs, also a few fragments of the other compositions, now remain. These losses, also of Greek lyrical works, are due to the destruction by fire of the two great libraries of Alexandria in 47 B. C., when the city was besieged by Julius Caesar. In this fire 700,000 volumes were destroyed.

Broken Umbrella

One rainy day as I was going to work my wife gave me an umbrella which was broken. It would open without pressing the button. Thinking it was better than nothing on a rainy day I took it. When I got on the street car it was crowded so I had to stand. Suddenly the umbrella opened up and with it lifted the dresses of the women around. I was never so embarrassed in all my life.—G. Cloth From Pineapples

In France a new fabric that promises to become popular is made from pineapple fiber. It looks like a mixture of cambric and silk. The idea is not essentially new as the natives of Africa have long made their fish nets from the fiber. The fiber does not disintegrate as quickly as cotton material. While the African product is very crude, the skilled process in France makes a superfine cloth, it is said.

HOW TO SOLVE A CROSS-WORD PUZZLE

When the correct letters are placed in the white spaces this puzzle will spell words both vertically and horizontally. The first letter in each word is indicated by a number, which refers to the definition listed below the puzzle. Thus No. 1 under the column headed "horizontal" defines a word which will fill the white spaces up to the first black square to the right, and a number under "vertical" defines a word which will fill the white squares to the next black one below. No letters go in the black spaces. All words used are dictionary words, except proper names. Abbreviations, slang, initials, technical terms and obsolete forms are indicated in the definitions.

The real cause of bad breath

"You cannot 'cover up' unpleasant breath for any length of time. The only way to rid yourself permanently of it is by removing the cause.

"Sometimes poor teeth are responsible. But the commonest cause of a coated tongue and offensive breath is constipation. You may not realize that your intestines are slow in eliminating waste matter, or that your breath is objectionable. But others will notice it.

"Get rid of constipation, and your breath will become fresh and sweet. Even more important, you will notice an immediate improvement in your health and spirits."

Nujol relieves constipation in Nature's own way

Constipation is dangerous for anybody. Nujol is safe for everybody. It does not affect the stomach and is not absorbed by the body. Medical authorities approve Nujol because it is so safe, so gentle, and so natural in its action.

Nujol simply makes up for a deficiency—temporary or chronic—in the supply of natural lubricant in the intestines. It softens the waste matter and thus permits thorough and regular elimination without overtaxing the intestinal muscles.

Nujol can be taken for any length of time without ill effects. To insure internal cleanliness, it should be taken regularly in accordance with the directions on each bottle. Unlike laxatives, it does not form a habit and can be discontinued at any time. Ask your druggist for Nujol today. Remove the cause of bad breath and begin to enjoy the perfect health that is possible only when elimination is normal and regular.

Senators Borah and Reed Put World Court Opposition Above Their President, Their Parties and Their People

By BURR PRICE

SENATOR Borah of Idaho and Senator Reed of Missouri recently rushed into the state of Illinois, turned around and rushed right out again. They emitted a few well-garbled denunciations of Senator McKinley and others like him who voted for American adherence to the World Court, but they couldn't stay long. They were in an awful hurry, and well they might be, because Senators Borah and Reed have set themselves the stupendous, awe-inspiring and inhuman task of talking to 93,825,113 American people in the next few months. That number is the number of "folks back home" in the states whose Senators had the audacity to back up President Coolidge and keep faith with their own American ideals by voting for the World Court in Washington on January 27. The gentleman from Idaho and the same from Missouri want to get the ear of these ninety-three million people (of course, the babies and children won't listen) and tell them what a perditional lot of Senators they have chosen by their popular vote and ask them kindly not to vote again for such legislators. Considering time, travel and the talkativeness of the two, we can only rise and remark: "Good luck, Bill!" "Good luck, Jim!"

Seventy-six United States Senators—being of sound mind and not superior to such great Americans as Theodore Roosevelt, William H. Taft, Warren Harding, Calvin Coolidge, Elihu Root and Charles E. Hughes, and also being peculiarly sensitive to the overwhelmingly expressed wishes of their constituents back home—cast their votes for the World Court. Those Senators came from the great and powerful states of this Union. You will see them indicated in white on the accompanying map. Some stretch of white, as the small boy would say. The states in which one Senator voted for the Court and one against are indicated by shadings. Adding the population of the "white" states to one-half the population of the shaded states, we have a total of 93,825,113.

In five states, both Senators voted against the Court and in eight states one Senator joined with them. Adding the full population of the "black" states to one-half the population of the shaded states, we have a total of 19,170,696 people.

That number is but seventeen per cent of the total population of this country: 112,995,814, according to the 1925 estimates. That number of people backs up the "mandates" of Senators Borah and Reed in denouncing the action of Senators representing more than 93,000,000 of our citizens.

As the Times, of Streator, says, these two strangers have come into this state attacking such brilliant Americans as Root, Taft and Coolidge and distorting the statements of George Washington.

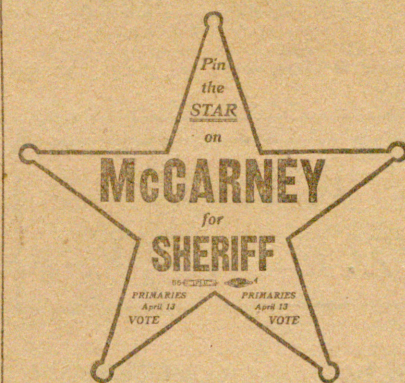

The Gibson City Courier declares that Senators Borah and Reed are attempting to Mussolinize America and are unwarrantedly mixing in Illinois affairs when they attempt to defeat Senator McKinley.

The expressions of these two journals, commenting on the situation in this state, is indicative of the resentment which Senators Borah and Reed will encounter wherever they oppose the Senators who stood up for their President, their party and their people. It seems inconceivable that the voters of Illinois who once supported Senator McKinley should turn from him in the primaries on April 13 on the strength of the peculiar opposition which two outsiders have seen fit to set up.

Duck Refuge

The Winneshiek bottom preserve is a 300-acre tract of land along the Mississippi river. Congress in 1924 passed a law preserving this land from drainage for a breeding and feeding place for ducks. There have been two or three instances where land in this vicinity has been drained for agricultural purposes and found absolutely useless.

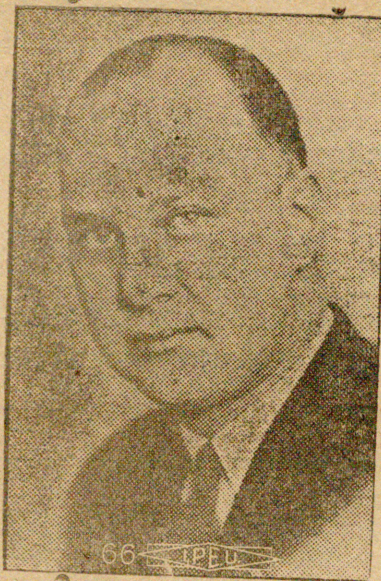

It was through the efforts of the Izank Walton league that this land was preserved.

The supervisor of assessments is granted the same power as assessors to assess, make changes or alterations in the assessment of property.

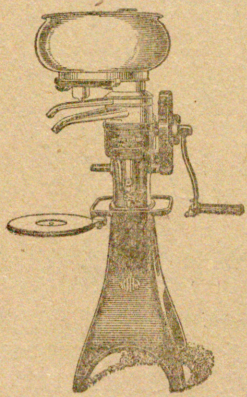

It, therefore, follows that the County Treasurer should have a general knowledge of the values of all classes of property.

PRIMARIES, APRIL 13, 1926

A Well Qualified Candidate

—From the Peotone Vedette:

As the primary campaign advances Peotone's candidate for superintendent of schools, Mr. Arch R. Evans, is receiving numerous assurances of support from all parts of the county.

This is not to be wondered at for Mr. Evans' record as a school man, together with his frank manner and pleasing personality, is a combination that is bound to win votes and support.

Mr. Evans is conducting his campaign in a dignified manner. His relations with the opposing candidate always have been cordial and there should be no reason why they cannot remain so.

Mr. Evans was born in Edwards county and reared in Wabash county at Belmont. He received his grade and high school education in Belmont, and his professional training was received at the Eastern Illinois Normal at Charleston and at Valparaiso University.

He has taught school successfully for fifteen years and is thoroughly up-to-date and familiar with all grades of the work from the one-room country school to the larger high schools. He had experience in the schools of Wabash, Edwards, Macon and Kankakee counties before coming to Peotone as superintendent two years ago.

We feel safe in saying that the Peotone school never has had better management than during the last two years, and we think that every patron of the school will agree with us. We in Peotone know that if Mr. Evans is nominated and elected to the office he seeks the schools of Will county will be in safe and strong hands.

This is the first opportunity that Peotone has had to secure a place on the county ticket for something like thirty years and naturally everyone is boosting for the home candidate.

Mr. Evans is married and is the father of five children. He is 35 years old—just in the prime of life.

In celebration of the occasion, Dr. Horn and Prof. Hewitt of Evanston will be with us to assist in the rededication service. Dr. Horn has been one of the outstanding men of the church and now is connected with Garrett Biblical Institute. Prof. Hewitt has been with us before and is well known in our community.

WORTH TO HAVE

NEW BUTCHER

Mr. C. C. Tobey, formerly Mr. Wm. Little's assistant, has taken over John Little's Meat Market.

STUDENT FELLOWSHIP VISIT WORTH

Several members of the Student Fellowship, which is a national Christian movement, held a conference at the Worth Community church Saturday and Sunday, March 20th and 21st. Young people from various parts of the country were present, coming from as far as Ann Arbor, Michigan to attend this meeting.

The group had a very interesting discussion on applying the principles of Christianity to problems of every day life which took up the greater part of their time in the community. The local young people are a part of this great movement which forms a basis for our church program. The days are said to be getting longer but the hours proved all too short to the interested young folks.

Worth is gaining recognition in various parts of the country because of our work here and many people are visiting our community to observe the work of the church. This is very good advertising for our rapidly growing city.

CELEBRATE BIRTHDAY.

The birthday party of Mrs. John Biedenkopf occurred too late to be included in the last edition of the "Booster". This happy party of children, grandchildren and great grandchildren will long be remembered by those present, and it is to be hoped that Mrs. Biedenkopf will live to enjoy many more birthdays.

LOCALS

Mrs. Ella Peterson entertained the Evergay Club at her home. The usual habit of gathering nuts has been changed to cultivating flowers. Miss Pansy Powers who was initiated as a member, is the first of our rare collection. It is to be regretted that our latest member has been confined to her home because of illness. The next meeting will be held at the home of Hazel Hildebrand.

Mrs. Harry P. Woods has been ill for the past two weeks, but is now well on the road to recovery.

Miss Ethel Stewart has been confined to her home since Sunday night, suffering with a severe cold.

Miss Harriet Crandall returned to work Saturday morning, March 20, after being ill several days.

Mr. Albert Soderlund completed the new communion table which adds to the appearance of our re-decorated church.

Mr. Fred Foyle is visiting friends in St. Louis. He intends to return in a few days.

Mr. H. O. Lysen is suffering with a very severe cold.

Rev. Paul T. Sanders is planning to move from Evanston to Worth. He is now looking for a place to live.

REOPEN CHURCH
EASTER MORNING

The church has been remodeled and redecorated and we surely have a very beautiful little chapel in which to worship. Mr. Palmer has made a special effort to create an artistic and worshipful atmosphere in his work of decorating. Mr. Lysen and Mr. Soderlund have done a very fine job of remodeling the pulpit and altar and re-arranging the pews. The church now gives the appearance of a Gothic chapel.

The church auditorium will be reopened April 4th, Easter Sunday morning with a very fine service.

RALPH C. AUSTIN

CANDIDATE FOR REPUBLICAN NOMINATION FOR COUNTY JUDGE

The hope of America depends upon the judgment used by its citizens in the selection of men fit for public office.

"The voter should study the list of prospective office holders and coolly consider their fitness for the places they are asking be given them."

Herald-News Editorial.

"FITNESS" is determined by training and experience.

Above all else the man who sits upon the County Bench and determines what shall be done with unfortunate children and also decides upon the legality and fairness of the taxes which we pay should have behind him training and experiences.

Ralph C. Austin, candidate for the Republican nomination for County Judge has had just the training and experiences that is necessary for the position he is seeking. During his fourteen years practice as a lawyer he has tried hundreds of cases in the County Court. He is regarded as an expert in special assessments. He has also made a special study of juvenile cases and is the author of a program which will put this county in the fore ranks of those handling the problems of children in a modern and efficient manner.

It is the duty of the County Treasurer to supervise assessments in his county.

To collect all taxes raised in his county, for all the taxing bodies therein and distribute the taxes so collected to the respective treasurers; and to prepare and give proper receipts to all tax payers.

To take charge of the money belonging to the County and to pay out on proper orders.

For this duty and responsibility the Treasurer is required to furnish good and adequate bonds.

The Treasurers term is for four years and he is ineligible to succeed himself.

If I am nominated by the Republican Party and elected by the people of Will County to the office of County Treasurer, I hereby pledge the people that I will administer that office faithfully, honestly, and efficiently; strictly according to the constitution and laws of the State.

County funds entrusted to my charge will be deposited in the banking institutions of the County and I will collect the real estate taxes as far as possible in the banks most convenient for the tax payers, and all interest earned on county funds will be publically accounted for and will accrue to the county.

I shall ask for no appropriation from the County Board, except for the legitimate and economical maintenance of the Treasurer's Office.

I will exert my influence to curtail appropriations, and seek to reduce the County tax rate, for the benefit of the farmers, laboring men and women, the manufacturers and business people of our county.

I will devote my time personally and exclusively to the duties and responsibilities of the Treasurer's Office.

BIOGRAPHICAL

Born in Wilton Township, Will County, Illinois.

Educated in the public schools of Will County and Northwestern Academy at Evanston, Illinois.

Taught school for two years.

Learned to be an abstractor of titles to real estate in the office of Ex-mayor Wm. C. Barber of Joliet Ill.

Employed by the Will County Abstract Company and with one assistant reviewed the files of nearly 20,000 cases in the office of the Clerk of the Circuit Court of Will County, preparing notes for index purposes, and became the first manager of the Company.

Actively engaged in banking and grain business for 25 years.

Elected Treasurer of Will County in 1918 and upon entering office developed the plan which was enacted into law by the Legislature of the State of Illinois and approved by Gov. Lowden as the method for the collecting in this State, which method saved $200,000 in surplus earnings during the four years.

Chosen chairman of the Will

County T. B. Sanitarium Board and acted in that capacity for four years, during the selection and buying of the site and planning and erection of the building for the Sanitarium which four years service was given freely, without salary of any kind.

This is an age of experts, men who are specialists in their line. Judges are selected because of their special legal training. We consult doctors who are specialists in various diseases. Managers are chosen in the various departments of all mercantile, manufacturing and industrial establishments because of special training, should not the voters of this great County of Will exercise the same judgement in the selection of their public officials?

More than half of the active years of my life has been spent along lines to especially fit me for the Office of County Treasurer and Ex-officio Supervisor of Assessments
